

Sharry

Sharry is a more basic file sharing platform that is more like a one-time password sharing tool than an actual drive storage platform like Matt Drive is. This is linked with the Matt-Cloud SSO, and will log in automatically with OIDC.

You can upload files to Sharri and share the links, and the shared links will work without a login.

When a link is shared, files can be viewed without any authentication if that is how it was configured. After creating the share it would need to be published with the button at the top.

There are options for the share that are configurable both during and after creation. I haven't tested what happens after expiration time, so I will leave this share up for a bit and update this article with the results when I have them.

I forgot about another share I put up a while back; this is what happens when the link expires.
